Friday February 12, 2016, 3 pm
Queen’s College, QC 4001

What kinds of equipment and technologies have ethnographers used for fieldwork, analysis and writing? What technologies have worked and failed for ethnographers? In what cases have using technologies become necessary? When are they problematic? What challenges are involved in using particular technologies for fieldwork? An informal roundtable discussion about the (im)practicalities of using different technologies for ethnographic fieldwork, analysis, and writing, from digital recorders to smartphones to virtual communities.
