COVID-19 and Travel Health Insurance – October 1, 2020

Non-essential travel advisories remain in place from the Government of Canada due to the coronavirus (COVID-19). These advisories can be accessed here: https://travel.gc.ca/travelling/advisories. As travel restrictions within Canada and in other countries continue to change and adapt to the evolution of COVID-19 responses, so too have the coverages available under Memorial’s emergency travel health plan provided by SSQ Insurance.

Below are the answers to the most frequently asked questions about this coverage.

FAQ

Who is covered under the travel health insurance policy with SSQ?

Eligible employees of Memorial University and certain affiliated employers are covered under the policy as well as retirees and their principal beneficiaries. Students are not covered under this emergency travel health policy. Eligible employees will generally be participants in the university’s group insurance program. While post-doctoral fellows are participants in the group insurance program they do not have travel health coverage.

Does the travel health insurance cover the coronavirus (COVID-19)?

Effective October 1, 2020, SSQ Insurance will cover all eligible emergency medical expenses resulting from COVID-19 for employees and retirees traveling outside their province of residence. This applies for domestic and international travel, whether for work or personal reasons. Dependent children and spouses who may be covered under a family plan are also covered for COVID-19 related expenses subject to the usual limits provided under the emergency travel health plan.

What about quarantine and self-isolation expenses for travel within and outside of Canada?

Costs associated with lodging and meals as a result of quarantine and self-isolation are not admissible under the emergency travel health policy, regardless of whether it’s domestic or international travel.

Am I covered if I decide to travel to a country for which a travel advisory was issued by the Canadian Government?

It is strongly recommended that travellers follow government advisories before planning any travel. The Government of Canada is currently recommending that all non-essential travel be avoided and has imposed border restrictions for discretionary travel.

The emergency travel health policy does not contain exclusions for travel to countries for which the Canadian Government has issued a travel advisory. Emergency medical expenses are therefore covered. It’s important to know that in regions affected by COVID-19, local public and governmental health authorities have priority over international assistance services. Therefore, SSQ’s emergency service provider, AXA Assistance, is limited with respect to the level of emergency assistance they can provide.

If I decide to stay on a trip despite the Government of Canada’s recommendations to return to Canada, would I be covered for COVID-19?

Government travel advisories are not excluded from the policy, the expenses are covered. However, it is strongly recommended that you follow any government advisories that may be in place to return to Canada, as it could become very difficult for AXA Assistance to aid should you require it. You must also be mindful of the 180 day trip limitation of your travel policy as extensions may not be granted beyond 180 days. Already existing extensions for active employees that have been pre-approved by SSQ Insurance will continue for the duration of the extension.

Is trip cancellation covered under the SSQ policy?

No, the travel health policy covers emergency medical expenses incurred for out of province travel only. Costs associated with the cancellation of a trip are not covered.
