Applications are invited from qualified individuals who are interested in being considered for a position as a per course instructor teaching Psychology 3640 The Psychology of Abnormal Behavior in Fall semester 2015 on the St. John’s campus. The course is scheduled for Slot15 MW 17.30-18.50, although this may change. The Calendar description is:

3640 The Psychology of Abnormal Behaviour covers problems of definition, the history of beliefs about abnormal behaviour and the implication of a behavioural model for the understanding and control of behaviour problems.
CR: PSYC 3650, PSYC 3626
PR: any 2000 level course in Psychology

Required qualifications: A demonstrated knowledge of clinical psychology and knowledge of the specific topics noted in the course description, and either (a) a M.Sc. in psychology OR (b) successful completion of at least 3 semesters in a full-time Psy.D. Program, are required. Applicants should have conducted research in this area. Preference will be given first to applicants who have previously taught Psychology 3640 on the St. John’s campus, and secondarily to applicants who have previous experience teaching Psychology 3640 elsewhere.

Applicants should send a letter of application, curriculum vitae, evidence of effective teaching, and the names of three references in electronic form to: psychsecretary@mun.ca

If that is not possible, applicants may send the information to:

Head, Department of Psychology
Memorial University of Newfoundland
St. John’s, NL
