PATRICK BERRIGAN MA

I completed my Master of Arts at Memorial University in 2011. Since graduating, I have worked as an economist with the Research and Development Corporation of Newfoundland and Labrador as well as the Nova Scotia Health Authority. Currently, I am conducting economic evaluations of healthcare interventions with both Canadian and international research groups.

I credit the faculty in the Department of Economics at Memorial University with expanding my economic understanding and cultivating my economic research abilities. Many of my professional accomplishments would not have been possible without the training I received at Memorial University.

The staff and faculty at Memorial University's Department of Economics make students feel welcome and at home. I would recommend new students take the chance to get out and experience Newfoundland and Labrador and not spend all their time in the library.
