

Kristen Lowitt is currently Assistant Professor in the Department of Geography and Environment at Brandon University. In this role, she teaches undergraduate classes about place, environment, and sustainability, and pursues a research program looking at the intersections of social and environment change and food sovereignty in rural and coastal regions.

<https://www.brandonu.ca/research-connection/rc-article/engaging-communities-in-sustainable-food-systems-research/>