

MEMORIAL UNIVERSITY FAMILY MEDICINE

If you are from Newfoundland and Labrador...

Is family medicine your passion? If you are from Newfoundland and Labrador but are studying medicine at a Canadian medical school other than Memorial, consider applying to the MUN Family Medicine program. We are interested in recruiting those of you who are planning on spending some portion of your family medicine career in a rural community.

Come to MUN – we are committed to provide a rock solid family medicine training program that includes experiences all over the province, New Brunswick, Nunavut and beyond. The majority of our faculty are located in rural locations or have past experience in rural practice. They know what it takes and are dedicated teachers and clinicians.

We take our mandate to train family physicians for Newfoundland and Labrador seriously. We know that many Newfoundlanders who are studying medicine elsewhere would make excellent family physicians here. This province needs good family physicians in a stronger primary care system that can really make a difference to the health of our population. Learn about family medicine here – where it counts and where you are needed.

We have unique health care issues that include serious genetic disorders, nutrition and lifestyle-related disease, and challenging demographic trends. Having come from here, you know what the people of Newfoundland and Labrador need. You can make a difference here. We welcome your application and we are happy to talk to you anytime about what we have to offer!
