

Max House Teaching Award for Excellence in Continuing Medical Education/Continuing Professional Development (CME/CPD)

Purpose:

This award is for outstanding contribution of an individual to advancing CME/CPD planning, teaching and/or scholarly research for physicians and health professionals in the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador and beyond. In the context of this award, research refers to peer-reviewed, adjudicated or equivalent research/scholarly work, including creative activity and performance. Nominees can include part-time or full-time faculty, staff, community-based physicians or allied health professionals or other members of the community who have made outstanding contributions to advancing CME/CPD planning, teaching and/or scholarly research in the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Dr. A. Maxwell House was an instrumental figure in the establishment and development of CME programming in the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador. He held a number of leadership positions in CME including: Director, Continuing Medical Education (1968 -1977); Assistant Dean, Continuing Medical Education (1978-1981); and Associate Dean, Continuing Medical Education and Clinical Affairs (1981-1984). Through his pioneering work in Telemedicine (distance technologies to support patient consults, continuing education) he brought CME programming to physicians and other health professionals across many rural communities in the Province.

Award

One (1) award may be presented biennially and the winner will receive a plaque. Winners will be notified directly and will be recognized at the Dean's Excellence Awards.

Nomination packages may be submitted electronically and include the following:

- Letter of Support
- Curriculum Vitae (abbreviated CVs will be accepted)

Please send nominations to:

Dr. Vernon Curran
Associate Dean of Educational Development
vcurran@mun.ca
Phone: 864-3346