ON CAMPUS

PHIL 1002 Introduction to Philosophy. One on-campus section for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course is a general introduction to the study of Philosophy both as a contemporary intellectual discipline and as a body of knowledge. The course covers the main divisions, fundamental questions and essential terminology of Philosophy through a reading of classical texts.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level in philosophy and the history of philosophy. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required, with previous experience in the direction and assessment of written work.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
PHIL 2030 Logic. One on campus section for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course is an introduction to traditional and modern logic.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level of philosophy. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required, specifically in the area of logic.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
DISTANCE COURSES

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course is an approach to philosophical thinking by way of analysis and critique of theories of human nature, classical and modern, and the world views associated with them. This course is of particular value to students interested in the Social Sciences and Humanities.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level of philosophy. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required. Recent experience with distance course delivery is preferred.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
PHIL 1100 Critical Thinking. One distance course for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course aims to develop critical analytic skills: i.e., the ability to recognize good and bad arguments, to explain why a particular argument is good or bad, and a general understanding of why a good argument ought to persuade and a bad argument ought not to persuade.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level of philosophy. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required. Recent experience with distance course delivery is preferred.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
PHIL 2100 HEALTH ETHICS. Two distance sections for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course examines concepts of health and illness and their ethical implications.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level in ethics and related areas in philosophy such as philosophy of health and health ethics. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required. Recent experience with distance course delivery is preferred.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
PHIL 2140 MEDIA ETHICS. One distance section for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course examines ethical issues and dilemmas arising in the realm of the mass media, within the context of foundational ethical theories and major philosophies of mass communication. Topics include the nature and structure of mass communication, the public sphere, and the role of the media in a functioning democracy. Subtopics include: propaganda, censorship, freedom of speech, and access to information and communication.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level of the philosophy of media ethics. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required. Recent experience with distance course delivery is preferred.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.
PHIL 2340 PHILOSOPHY OF FILM. One distance section for the Spring Term, 2020.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course introduces some of the central philosophers, topics and themes in the philosophy of film. Topics and themes include: the nature of film image, the relationship between film and “reality”, the social/political role and function of film and the nature and value of the documentary. The course will also consider the representation of broader philosophical ideas in film.

QUALIFICATIONS: A M.A. in Philosophy is required with demonstrable extensive study at the graduate level of the philosophy of film. Proven teaching ability at post-secondary level is required. Recent experience with distance course delivery is preferred.

All candidates are asked to complete an application form for per course teaching available online at the departmental website (www.mun.ca/phil/) or from the departmental office (AA3069-70). Along with the application form, applicants not on the Philosophy seniority list are asked to provide a copy of their C.V. and the names of two references.

All positions are subject to budgetary approval.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadian citizens and permanent residents will be given priority.

Memorial University is committed to employment equity and diversity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates, including women; people of any sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression; Indigenous peoples; visible minorities, and racialized people; and people with disabilities. As part of Memorial University’s commitment to employment equity, all applicants are invited to identify themselves as a member of a target group(s) as appropriate. Applicants cannot be considered as a member of a target group(s) unless they complete an employment equity survey. If you do not receive a survey or have any questions, please contact equity@mun.ca.

Applications should be sent to Dr. Suma Rajiva, Head, Department of Philosophy, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, Memorial University, St. John’s, NL A1C 5S7, or by email to jillr@mun.ca by March 3, 2020.